Dear Students,

I am sure missing you. I am doing a daily video-tweet as a way of saying Hi everyday. It is posted on the twitter feed on the school website and goes directly to those people with Twitter accounts who are following @LivingstoneVSB. Some great things are happening in the Vancouver School District with feeding students and providing childcare for our Essential Service workers. Some great things are also happening in the Livingstone School Community with teachers connecting with families and students.

At home you have lots of opportunity to learn and stay curious. This long weekend, I am going to set up my first Zoom Easter Celebration. Ms. Wilson inspired me with her story of playing Charades with her friends on Zoom. I thought it would be a fun way to celebrate with family while physical distancing. It will also be a way to invite my daughter in Taiwan, my sister in Texas and my cousin in Rome to join in on the celebration. I'm reading cookbooks and online to find some interesting new ways to decorate and find things to cook for our celebration.

I am looking forward to four days of reading on my deck in the sunshine. If you're looking for some new books, check out the online collection posted by the school website. For those of you who love Harry Potter as much as I do, check out Harry Potter at Home site. The choosing hat assigns you a house and you can discover the type of wand you'd be given.

I hope you are busy making some interesting plans for the Easter Weekend. I'd love to know what you are reading and what you're doing. You can write a letter to the school address or email me at cfroese@vsb.bc.ca It would be great to have some student art, writing, and thoughts to post on the website via Twitter. Hoppy Easter weekend.

Sincerely,

Your Principal, Ms. Froese
