

Note:
- A DOI number is a Digital Object Identifier, an alphanumeric number that is unique to a document online. Usually available for Journal articles.
- Whenever possible use the DOI in your citation, rather than the URL. Always precede the DOI number with doi: (See first example above.)
- No Access Date required for articles that are online, because the content of the published article in digital format is the same as that in print. No changes will occur to the content. Unlike blogs or websites that may be updated.

Remember to review the General Rules that appear on the “Citing Resources – MLA style” page.